

PS Executive Committee Confers Honorary Junior Paleontologist

Paleontological Society

The Paleontological Society has conferred an Honorary Junior Paleontologist title to Amery Green (scroll to page #22). Amery, who suffers from Mitochondrial Disease, aspires to grow up to be a paleontologist. The idea was brought to the Paleontological Society by the Aurora Fossil Museum Director Cynthia Crane, and the Executive Committee approved the measure in three days. Read more about it in the Paleontological Society Publication "Priscum." To support Amery Green's geoscience endeavors you are welcomed to visit her Facebook Page.
