

Published on American Geosciences Institute (<https://www.americangeosciences.org>)

Home > EARTH: Iowa Impact Crater Confirmed

EARTH: Iowa Impact Crater Confirmed

Scientists have recently confirmed the existence of an impact crater buried below the town of Decorah, Iowa. Scientists first discovered what they thought resembled a crater in 2008, but now it has been corroborated by an airborne geophysical survey and hydrology surveys. Scientists estimate the diameter of the crater at 5.5 kilometers wide, nearly five times the size of the Barringer Meteor Crater in Arizona.

Press Release PDF:

09JUL13_PR_EARTH_Crater.pdf
