An Introduction to Professional Writing for Geoscience Careers

This course will provide an overview of the writing skills that geoscience students develop during their undergraduate and graduate academic training, the skills and tools that are needed for non-academic careers, and advice for students on how to acquire the needed writing skills as they prepare for and pursue their career path.

The course presenters are: Pranoti Asher, Scholar-in-Residence, American Geosciences Institute; Manager, Higher Education, American Geophysical Union; Bob Simmons, HRP Associates, Inc, Chief Hydrogeologist; and Ron Wallace, Georgia Department of Natural Resources (retired).
