

stomatal index

stomatal index . In paleobotany, the ratio of the number of epidermal cells to the number of stomata in a given area of a leaf, times 100. The index is used to compensate for the differences in stomatal density between sun and shade leaves, dry-climate and wet-climate leaves of the same species, and in the reconstruction of past levels of CO₂. Cf: stomatal density.

Tags:

- geotimes

Website:

GeoWord of the Day
