

Published on American Geosciences Institute (<https://www.americangeosciences.org>)

Home > EARTH: Carbon and the City

EARTH: Carbon and the City

In 2010, the world reached a milestone: The number of people living in urban areas reached 50 percent. This monumental shift from rural to urban living comes with consequences. Growing urban populations will have to learn to efficiently deal with increased demands for energy, transportation, sanitation, food and water while balancing the environmental impacts of such densely populated regions.

Press Release PDF:

EARTHJune_PR1.pdf
