ALEXANDRIA, Va. — With more than 24,000 anticipated attendees, the American Geophysical Union (AGU) Fall Meeting represents the largest confluence of earth and space scientists in the world. As in years past, the American Geosciences Institute (AGI) will have a strong presence at the Fall Meeting, driving conversation on topics related to the geoscience workforce and the importance of geoscience information to research and decision-making.

Throughout the meeting, AGI will also be represented in the AGU Exhibit Hall. All attendees are encouraged to stop by booth #921 to reconnect with colleagues, meet AGI and EARTH Magazine staff, and discuss upcoming internship, fellowship, and scholarship opportunities. For general information about the AGU Fall Meeting, go to <https://fallmeeting.agu.org/2017>.

See below for a full list of AGI presentations and sessions at the AGU Fall Meeting, which runs December 11 - 15 at the Ernest N. Morial Convention Center in New Orleans:

About AGI

The American Geosciences Institute (AGI) is a nonprofit federation of 52 scientific and professional associations that represents more than 260,000 geoscientists. Founded in 1948, AGI provides information services to geoscientists, serves as a voice of shared interests in the profession, plays a major role in strengthening geoscience education, and strives to increase public awareness of the vital role the geosciences play in society's use of resources, resiliency to natural hazards, and interaction with the environment.

AGI is a not-for-profit 501(c)(3) organization dedicated to serving the geoscience community and addressing the needs of society. AGI headquarters are in Alexandria, Virginia.

The American Geosciences Institute represents and serves the geoscience community by providing collaborative leadership and information to connect Earth, science, and people.
