Additional Resources

Several brief, informal surveys questions were posed during the Forum. The results shown here reflect the views of the participants at the time and are presented for informational purposes only.

The Switch Energy Project is a multi-prong effort designed to build a balanced national understanding of energy. It includes: the film, a huge video-based website sure to become one of the web's foremost energy resources; a university screening and efficiency program sponsored by the Geological Society of America and the Verizon Foundation; and a primary school energy education program co-developed with the American Geosciences Institute. The project is produced by Arcos Films and directed by Harry Lynch. (www.switchenergyproject.com)
