Today's Objectives

This is not an annual training requirement. It is meant to provoke thought. So keep an open mind and a curious ear. We will take question/discussion breaks during the presentation and a final one at the end.

Today's Road Map

- Student Mental Health has deteriorated across the nation.
- This crisis is a sign that modern college campuses (and by extension early career scientists) are undergoing a transformation and what you can do about it.
- Discuss what I mean by "Detect, Connect, and Direct" those in need.

A tale of two kingdoms: “Once upon a time...”

Scenario: Your student, Jim, doesn't turn in assignments or completes projects on time. Initially, he presented as motivated, articulate in group meetings, and very conscientious. He has potential, but seems to be "blowing it all off." He's become moody, unfocused, disheveled and you think you smell alcohol on his breath. You decide to meet with him.

How do you and your institution deal with the Jim's of the world?

(you can replace student with early career professional).

Student mental health has deteriorated
across the nation. (APA, 2022)

Adolescents are experiencing more concerning mental health problems, all across the nation. And it may get worse. (CDC, 2022)

This crisis may be a sign that modern college campuses, and our children, are undergoing a generational transformation. (Bacho, 2022)

“Times, they are a changin’...(Bob Dylan, 1963)

“Be professional, then get personal. No, do the personal work, then you will get professional work.” Dr. Cuevas, Vice Provost, University of Tennessee.

OLD: The old process was “do professional-grade, reliable, and timely work” on a consistent basis, then you get to know me more on a personal level, if at all.

New: The new process is, “get to know me as a person, first, then I will provide you good, reliable, and timely work” more consistently.

“They didn’t understand the assignment.”
Stephen Bacho (8th Grade)

“Our teachers are saying it is important to know about mental health problems and that they care. But, we are all crowded into a gymnasium, made to watch a power-point and then sent back to class. It seems like they are checking a box and can say that they talked about it. No one took it seriously and everyone was on their phones. Adults don’t seem to know how to talk to us about this stuff.”

Choose from among many science-driven techniques.

Some respond best to meditation & mindfulness, and others succeed with cognitive behavioral therapy (CBT). People vary in how they best learn, grow, and thrive therapeutically, and we accommodate those differences with a wide range of science-driven approaches to mental health therapies, including:

	Cognitive Behavioral Therapy (CBT)		Eye Movement Desensitization & Reprocessing (EMDR)
	Mindfulness & Meditation		Neuro-Linguistic Programming (NLP)
	Dance & Movement		Couples & Relationship Therapy
	Dialectical Behavioral Therapy (DBT)

“As a parent and a leader, I promise to treat your kid’s professional and personal development; like I hope you are treating my kids professional and personal development.”

In summary...

- As you return back to your students, know that their interactions in this new world of learning and work transformation can be emotionally challenging. There is a mental health crisis going on. You are on the front lines. Know what it looks like for your institution.
  - Meaningful human relationships can help your students establish a sense of control when faced with emotional turbulence. Reach out to those in need. Be a first responder.
  - Remember the adversity can be transformational, stress is not necessarily all bad, connect to protect, balance fuel with friction and remember the four pillars of emotional intelligence and how they can help us cope. Engage your students, and if you can't fully meet their needs, direct them to those who can.
